|  | Vending machines are unhealthy to have in schools, and they can cost students a lot of money. They usually contain junk food, which is filled with fat and sugar. Vending machines should be removed from schools. Vending machine food can make it harder for students to concentrate in class. Being around classmates as they crinkle wrappers, pop open soda cans, and spill crumbs and drinks can be annoying. A student who buys from a vending machine every day, for example, might spend $1.50 a day, and up to $270 in a school year! Finally, eating food from vending machines tends to make students energetic and hyper, which gets them in trouble with their teachers. Obviously, students and vending machines don't mix! | | |

They can use the laptop to do research for all of their classes. All students should be able to use a laptop at school. Students can be much more productive when doing group projects on the computer. When they are in a job interview, they will be able to talk about all of the experience they have with computer programs.
